Funeral of the Murdered Clerical Hostages.

PARIS, June 7.

The funeral ceremonies to-day over the remains of the five clerical victims of the Commune were solemn and impressive. Notre Dame was grandly arranged. The central object in the solemn scene was the gorgeous catafalco containing the remains of the Archbishop, surrounded by minor structures bearing the corpses of Duquerry, the Curé of Madelaine, Surin, Grand Vicar of the Diocese de Cour and Sebastian. The coffin of the Archbishop was covered with a pall of black velvet, embroidered and enriched with a massive silver cross. Thousands of tapers were burning in silver candelabra, and incense in vessels, also silver. The floor was covered with black cloth, but it was covered with cloth bespangled with silver stars, of the transepts, two hundred and fifty feet wide, appeared like huge reds. Black drapery covered every statue, except those of Virginius, Child and St. Denis, the first Bishop of Paris. In the midst of all were the black and charred remains of the Bishop's chair and his throne were also burned, and from which the Communists endeavored to burn the Cathedral. It was and will be left intact as a memento of the crime. Along the route of the procession the windows and streets were crowded with spectators. Bells were tolling and a salute of guns was fired. A strong force of regulars, with reversed arms and muffled drums, were in the procession. The funeral of the Archbishop was covered with silver, and was drawn by six horses. Another beautiful car, containing the remains of Surin, followed. The procession reached the Cathedral at 11 o'clock. The inside of the church was crowded with members of the Assembly, priests and Sisters of Charity. At 11 o'clock the priests and deputies, with the military music, left the church and proceeded to the great doors, which were draped in black. The chanting then commenced, and outside was heard the beating of drums, the pealing of trumpets and the roaring of cannon, and at the elevation of the host the firing was repeated. The altar was magnificently decorated, and the service was long and solemn. MacMahon, Drusky, Vinery, Lach, Merault and Favre were present.

THE WAR MINISTER ASSASSINATED.
World's Cable.

PARIS, June 8.

The War Minister Gallifit, was assassinated to-day by the widow of one of the Communists, who was shot by his orders. The Assembly removed the disabilities of the Orleans Princes.

VERSAILLES, June 8.

In the Assembly to-day the debate on the removal of the political disabilities of the Orleans Princes, adjourned Monday, was resumed. The committee reported in favor of abolishing the law of proscription, when Thiers rose and said he had opposed an abrogation of the law, because he believed that such action would be dangerous. He only assented to the views of the committee on the Princes engaging not to sit in the Assembly and not to enter into any intrigues against the Republic. The safety of the Republic had been confided to him and he should not betray the trust. The Assembly then voted to abrogate the law of proscription by 494 yeas to 103 nays, and proceeded to declare valid the election of Duke d'Almeida and Prince de Joinville to seats in the Assembly by a vote of 404 to 113.

HORRIBLE CASUALTY ON THE L. & M. S. RAILROAD.

A brakeman is Run Over by One Train, and Stabs Himself to Death in Anticipation of Being Run Over by Another.

CLEVELAND, June 8.

A brakeman named Jones, employed on a freight train on the L. & M. S. Railroad, accidentally fell, early this morning, between the cars while the train was moving, between Kingsville and Madison. He fell upon the track, and the remainder of the train passed over his legs, tearing them off and mangled his body. While lying on the track he heard a passenger train approaching. Expecting that he would not be seen, and that the cars would run over him, he drew a knife from his pocket, opened the blade, and stabbed himself twenty-two times about the breast and left arm. He had tried to penetrate his breast and produce death sooner, but was too weak to guide his blows. The engineer of the train saw him in time to stop the cars. He was taken to Madison, where he died soon after.

Revenue Decision by the Attorney General—States not subject to Dividend Tax.

WASHINGTON, June 7.

Secretary Boutwell a few months ago referred to Attorney General Sherman the question whether the State of Massachusetts is entitled to a return of internal revenue, paid in dividends, according to the State as a stockholder in the Boston & Albany Railroad. The Attorney General has just submitted to the Secretary his opinion in the case. He states that he does not understand the law to compel the commission to refund taxes which he may judge to have been erroneously collected. He is authorized, not obliged, to refund; but representing a government that abhors injustice, the commissioner should refund, in all cases, illegal collections, except when an apparent fault of the taxpayer, or his acquiescence in that constitutes sufficient circumstance to justify the collection. Whether such circumstances exist in this case is for the commissioner to decide.

The Attorney General, after reviewing the action of several of his predecessors in cases similar to the one before him, says the conclusion is reached that the dividend on the stock were not subject to tax, and informs the Secretary that he should assume that this tax was not legally collected.

LETTER FROM GEN. SHERMAN.

He Admits the New Orleans Speech, But Would Not Have the Presidency if Unanimously Elected.

NEW YORK, June 8.

A letter from General Sherman, dated at Fort Sill, Comanche Reservation, May 25, and addressed to the editor of a New York paper, says:

"I have been skirting the Texas frontier for the past month, and here, for the first time, I hunt the files of Eastern papers, by which I see that quite an unnecessary muss has been raised by a purported speech made by me at the supper of the Union League Club of New Orleans, on the night preceding my departure from that city. Whoever mentioned that, as a speech made by me, committed a breach of propriety, I was assured by the President of the Society that no reporters were present, and that whatever was said would be sacred and confined to the persons present. Now, as to politics, I think all my personal friends know my deepest abhorrence to that subject, yet, as you seem not to understand me, I hereby state—and mean all I say—that I never have been, and never will be a candidate for the Presidency; that if nominated by either party I should peremptorily decline, and even if unanimously elected I should decline to serve."

THE INDIANS.

Indian Depredations Arrested at Fort Sill by Order of Gen. Sherman.

WASHINGTON, June 8.

A few days preceding May 28th, Gen. Sherman was at Fort Sill, Indian Territory, and he gave an account of the capture of some of the Indians engaged in the last raid into Texas, in which seven men were killed and a corn train plundered. Saturday, the 27th, a large party of Indians came in for the usual rations, and San Tanta, a notoriously bad Indian, not only admitted to San Tanta again made some admissions; varying the details in the story, he began to see the deed was not one to be proud of. Gen. Sherman told Tanta, to say whether San Tanta should be arrested on the spot, and Tanta answered that he desired and requested the arrest to be made. Accordingly, after a little maneuvering to catch all those present who were engaged in the affair, San Tanta, Sanluk and Big Tree were arrested, and are in close confinement. They were to be carefully guarded and turned over to General McKento be taken back by him to Texas and tried by civil authority. The Indians begged to be shot on the spot, fearing that they would be lynched or mobbed, which they dreaded terribly. Gen. Sherman further demanded of the Kiowas the forty-one mules captured from some train, and while the discussion of the proposition was going on, Lone Wolf made another demonstration, which all most resulted in a general fight. One Indian was killed, several shots fired, and the Indian camp stampeded. Gen. Sherman writes that in all these cases the Indian agent has been consulted, and his wisdom has been the rule of conduct. He lays great stress on the necessity for trial and punishment of the three arrested, and says if they go back to their tribe free no agency will be safe. He favors strictly a legal course, which the Indians dread far more than the shorter verdict of the bullet.
